

A Tribute

Many years ago, two batches of students left their high school, St. Aloysius' Anglo Indian High School, to carve out a niche for themselves in the world. The path ahead was uncertain, but they were carrying a talisman "Virtute Et Labore", that steered them through to their respective destinations. Now, nearly twenty years later, as they look back, they realize that what they are is due, in good measure, to where they were that many years and more ago. As they recall those years, a common sentiment wells in the heart – gratitude to their teachers of St. Aloysius'. For years, the faculty had strained every sinew to drill concepts into those wayward minds. They had constantly raised the bar and driven the students into new vistas of learning. They had given a hand-holding that stood the students in good stead in life's journeys ahead.

On September 5th 2007, time will stand still for these Aloysians, from the batches of 1987 and 1988, as they get together again after nearly two decades to revisit those times and pay a fitting tribute to these teachers.

Invitation

The coming Teachers' Day will be a watershed in the annals of St. Aloysius Anglo Indian High School as it marks a new beginning of activity involving the school and its alumni. On this noble day, the ex-students of the school will felicitate the Retired Teachers in the august presence of the Management and the Current Teachers. The felicitations will culminate with the launch of the school's official website.

It will be our great pleasure to have you in our midst for this joyous occasion. We request the pleasure of your presence for this programme and for the lunch, in-between.
